

Find
CC Licensed Work

License
Your Work

Search Site | Worldwide

Select a jurisdiction

Share, reuse, and remix — legally.

Creative Commons provides free tools that let authors, scientists, artists, and educators easily mark their creative work with the freedoms they want it to carry. You can use CC to change your copyright terms from "All Rights Reserved" to "Some Rights Reserved."

We're a nonprofit organization. Everything we do — including the software we create — is free.

Home

Weblog

FAQ

Learn More

About

People

Opportunities

Press Kit

Newsletter

Choosing a License

Legal Concepts

Think

Policies

Privacy

Sitemap

Contact

Explore

Audio

Video

Images

Text

Education

Software

The Commons

 Science

Latest News

OnClassical relaunches

Eric Steuer, August 14th, 2007

Congratulations to the folks at OnClassical on the relaunch of their site. OnClassical is an indie classical music label that's been distributing albums since 2003. Previews of all of the label's music are offered under CC's BY-NC-SA license. Check out OnClassical's "What's new?" page for details about the updates.

Ten Car Train: CC-licensed short story site

Eric Steuer, August 14th, 2007

Ten Car Train is a new site featuring excellent short stories, commentary, and creative fiction published under the Creative Commons BY-NC-ND license.

From the site's quite-awesome mission statement:

You should read these pieces in their entirety while at work or when someone is paying you to do something else.

Tay Zonday to perform with Girl Talk

Eric Steuer, August 14th, 2007

Tay Zonday, the singer/keyboardist behind the insanely popular Creative Commons-licensed hit "Chocolate Rain" (the video for which has now been viewed on YouTube more than 5.5 million times) is set to make his concert debut in Minneapolis on October 5 at a show featuring none other than remix king Girl Talk (who you might recall performed at last September's CC benefit show in New York) and eccentric electronic musician Dan Deacon. Hooray for Tay!

Also, check out this MTV.com article about Tay, which says that there are currently more than 4,000 remixes and remakes of "Chocolate Rain" floating around on the Web. Wow!

CC citizen journalism site GroundReport re-launches; GroundReport TV launches officially

Eric Steuer, August 13th, 2007

Check out the relaunch of citizen journalism portal GroundReport (previously discussed here), as well as the official launch of GroundReport TV (previously discussed here). GroundReport, which lets people publish news articles, photos, audio recordings, and videos uses Creative Commons licenses to expand the reach of its content. Sign up for an account and start submitting your own news; as a contributor, you can earn a share of advertising revenues based on the amount of traffic your stories receive.

Commons

 iCommons

 ccInternational

 ccLearn

 ccLabs

 ccMixer

Featured Projects

OER Commons

OER Commons provides open educational resources for teaching and learning that are freely available on-line for everyone to use, whether you are an instructor, student, or self-learner. OER Commons uses Web 2.0 features such as tags, ratings, comments, reviews, and social networking in order to create an on-line experience that engages educators in sharing their best teaching and learning practices. OER Commons is a project of ISKME, and it encourages users to use any Creative Commons license except No Derivatives.

CC Labs

CC Labs is where we demo our new technology projects. Our current innovations are a "Freedoms" license generator, a simplified DHTML licensing engine, and experimental metadata.

More...

Featured Commoners

Except where otherwise noted, content on this site is licensed under a Creative Commons Attribution 3.0 License

Help put Creative Commons into your applications.

Join our discussion lists.
Read and contribute to our wiki.

Join us at the next Creative Commons
event.

Projects

Read about people and projects that use CC.